LOOKED LIKE HE DIED FROM ROASTING.

The Appearance of Smiler, one of the Men Electrocuted.

SUGGESTIVE OF HORRIBLE TORTURE.

But the Marks Were More Closely Examined. It Was Seen That They Did Not Extend Beyond the Outer Skin.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The Herald this morning publishes the result of a second autopsy held by Drs. Culver, Rodenstein and Mook on the body of Harris A. Smiler, one of the four men electrocuted at Sing Sing Tuesday. To the unprofessional mind, the Herald says, the condition of the body was horrifying, and seemed as if the man had died from roasting. The blackened eyes, stripped of the skin, the flacid and parboiled leg and the mysterious scars on the nose and chin were suggestive of a horrible torture. But when the visible marks were more closely examined it was easy to see that they were superficial, for they did not extend beyond the outer skin. In describing the body as it lay in undertaker Hulberg's establishment, the Herald reporter says: The features were composed but painfully discolored. The shaven head and the unshaven chin helped to make the head repellent. The low crowned skull and forehead looked like those of a negro and the discolored place about the eyes added to the sinister and forbidding aspect of the face. In a place where the skull was thin for the placing of the head electrode the executioners had clasped it across the eyes. The fierce, white hot current which set a bucket of water boiling in a breath had scarred and stripped the skin in a horrible way, leaving the raw, red surface, of the cutis exposed to view. At the edges strips of the epidermis, the outer skin, were curled up and dried like parchment and easily came off when touched by the finger. A piece of skin had come off from the bridge of the nose and there was a small scar on the chin. When the right leg was bared another painful sight was disclosed. The lower electrode, a concave pad of brass, six inches by three or thereabouts had been strapped on just between the right knee, its mark was there, for the skin beneath had been stripped away and a raw looking place had run up the under side of the leg past the knee joint. This latter was as mysterious as the marks on the chin and head.

THE EASIEST AND SMOOTH-EST DEATH

Dr. Daniels is Charmed With the Way the Condemned Men Were Electrocuted.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 9.—Dr. C. M. Daniels, who was one of the witnesses at the Sing Sing electrocutions, was interviewed this morning. He said he was in honor bound not to say anything concerning what happened in the death chamber but there were some things he could consciously tell. He said: In the first place, all the newspaper stories about the awful roasting the men got are very much exaggerated. In fact, they are untrue. There was no roasting, no burning, no horrible smell and no smoke. It was in fact just the smoothest and quickest death imaginable. No jarring or struggling, no twitching or anything of the kind. The men simply sat down and the current was turned on and they were dead.

THE SIGHT WAS HORRIBLE.

Whoever Said the Body Was Not Burned Was a Liar.

By The United Press.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The Evening World had several reporters follow the body of Smiler, one of the men electrocuted at Sing Sing on Tuesday last, to this city. One of the reporters secreted himself in the cellar of Undertaker Hulberg's where the body of Smiler was carried on its arrival in this city. The reporter says in his account that the undertaker and his men after the body was lowered in the cellar removed the upper half of the lid of the coffin, when one of the men uttered an ejaculation of horror at the sight. "Whoever said that this body was not burned is a liar!" muttered one of them. The undertaker and his assistants then put back the cover on the coffin and went up stairs to the store above. The next instant the reporter was by the side of the coffin. The sight was horrible. On the dead man's forehead were two red spots. They were about two inches and a quarter apart. They seemed to be sunken and they appeared as if they had been burned. The rest of the forehead was discolored. The eyebrows were mostly burned away. The ends of some of the hair showed the sizzled appearance produced by heat. The eyelids were burned and the eyelashes singed and partially destroyed although not as much gone as were the eyebrows. But the awful disfigurement was the face. Across the bridge of the nose was a burn, red and seared. The inner rim of each nostril showed distinctly that it had been burned. On each side of the face the skin hung loose. It was shriveled up. The flesh behind was yellow and red. It looked like red beef that had been placed on white-hot iron. Both sides of the face were not alike. The burn on the left side was the larger. It covered a space of two and a half inches by an inch and a half. The scar on the right side was a trifle smaller. The other parts of the face were of a peculiar red color. The lips were compressed and the corners showed that they had been burned. The dead man's beard showed a two day's growth, and his mustache was short. It had the appearance of having been trimmed to conceal the fact that it had been singed. The reporter lifted up the head and examined the back of the head and neck. The head had been shaven. The scalp was white and normal. Back of the neck at the base of the brain blood had settled in considerable quantities and traces of the peculiar redness of the face seemed to extend down the spinal column. The body of Smiler was laid to rest in Woodlawn cemetery this morning. Mrs. Lizzie Smiler, who is an inmate of the Margaret Strachan Home, was the only mourner.

HON. H. A. GILLIAM PASSES AWAY.

One of the Last of a Brilliant Coterie.

SEVENTY-SIX YEARS OLD.

Having Done His Part Well, He Rests From His Labors.

(Special to State Chronicle.)

TARBORO, N. C., July 9.—Judge Henry A. Gilliam, one of our most esteemed citizens, passed away at noon to-day. He had been very feeble for a long time, and his mental faculties had become much impaired. His disease was softening of the brain. He lived a long life of usefulness and his death is greatly deplored. He was seventy-six years of age.

At the time of his death, announced in our telegraphic columns, JUDGE HENRY A. GILLIAM was about seventy-six years of age. He was a native of Gates county. In the war he was a Major in active service and was taken prisoner at the fall of Roanoke Island. For almost twenty years he was the leading lawyer of the north eastern Carolina bar, and was regarded as a man of unusual intellectual power. He practiced law in the first and second judicial districts until 1879, residing at Edenton, when he removed to Raleigh and formed a co-partnership with the late Major JOHN GATLING. This partnership continued until he was appointed Judge of the Superior Court by Gov. JARVIS to fill out an unexpired term. At the end of the term he declined to be a candidate for the nomination. At the conclusion of his judicial service he removed to Tarboro, where he practiced law in partnership with his son, DON GILLIAM, Esq. Judge GILLIAM had the misfortune to lose his wife about 1875. He leaves surviving him, two sons, DONNELL GILLIAM and HENRY A., Jr. Before the war he carried the county of Washington, which was strongly Democratic, he being the Whig nominee, and represented that county in the Legislature. He is the last to leave us of a large list of leading and influential lawyers and representative men of the north eastern section of the State among whom were COL. OUTLAW, DAVID M. CARTER, W. T. MARTIN, PATRICK H. WINSTON, WILLIAM A. MOORE, GEN. STUBBS and FENNER SATTERWAITE, who were the ornaments of that section. JUDGE BARNES is the last survivor of this brilliant coterie.

A Wild Goose Chase to Start From Norfolk.

(By The United Press.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 9.—A letter has been received by a government official here stating that a Captain Annatt, at Norfolk, Va., is collecting a crew to man a vessel now being armed and fitted out on Long Island Sound to proceed to Mexican waters to "hunt for treasure." The nature of the treasure is not stated, but from the letter it is thought that the expedition is for filibustering purposes. The writer called attention to the expedition and asks if it will be lawful, as he wishes to join it if so. No reply has been sent to the inquiry.

HOW THE KAISER SPENT THE DAY.

He Took a Ride and Received Deputation of German Societies.

By The United Press.

LONDON, July 6.—After breakfast at Buckingham palace this morning the Emperor accompanied by a few members of his personal suite and some of the gentlemen of his English guard of honor, mounted horse and proceeded to Hyde Park where the imperial visitor and his companions enjoyed the pleasure of a mile and a half canter along historic Rotten Row.

Compliments were heard on all sides as the Emperor with graceful force steadily held the restive horse just a neck ahead of the foremost animal of his suite and at the same time acknowledged with courteous inclination of the head the respectful salutations of the on-lookers. The ride was evidently keenly relished by the Emperor and his followers. Later in the day the Kaiser and Kaiserine granted an audience to deputations from the various German social and benevolent societies of London. In each instance formal addresses were made by the chairman of the visiting societies, to all of which the Kaiser made brief responses. When the formalities had been disposed of, both the Kaiser and Kaiserine conversed with the members of the deputations. A special reception was accorded a number of officers of the German reserve army, who are now in London, and who appeared in the full-dress uniform of their military rank. To each of the officers, the Kaiser spoke a word of friendly greeting.
